I am a local resident and amateur artist. I would like to run a two or three free water colour painting workshop for the community and display some of my own art work in the Arlesey library.

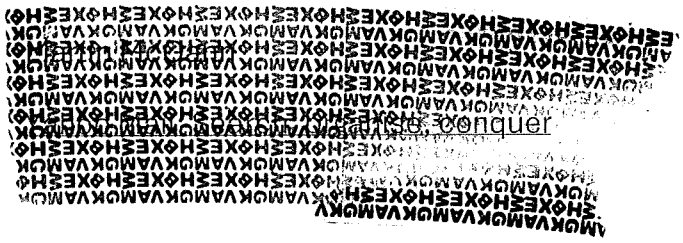

I aim to accept up to 12 guests per session. Theses will be adults of any level of ability. The session will include a basic introduction to the equipment and materials followed by simple markmaking, brushwork and applying colour washes. Each of the attendees will be invited to complete a basic painting which they can take home after the session.

I propose that ATC grant free use of the library for the workshop and allow me to accept voluntary donations to offset the cost of materials.

If there is sufficient interest, I would like to establish a regular painting club in the village on a paying basis. I hope you feel this is a positive initiative. Please see attached (draft) poster for the event. Please note the date is just an example.

If you have any questions, please come back to me.

Many thanks
